

EASTERWOOD IS DRUNK WHEN HIS CASE IS CALLED

J. H. Easterwood was drunk when he appeared in police court yesterday afternoon. He was drunk when he wandered out into the open air. He was perhaps still drunker early in the evening when he visited the Planter's hotel on North Second avenue and used such abusive and profane language that the young women rooming there found it necessary to call the police. And he was quite as drunk when after removing $18.65 and some junk from his clothes, the arresting officers placed him in the bull pen of the city jail where he spent the night sobering up. Unless he is given the opportunity of furnishing bail today when he becomes sober, he will face City Magistrate Thomas this afternoon, the second time within twenty-four hours.

Easterwood was in police court yesterday afternoon to answer a charge of disorderly conduct by fighting, resulting from an attack he is said to have made upon a man named Connor, while the latter was engaged in a card game in the rear of Eddie Doyle's pool room. Easterwood was not simply under the influence of liquor with his breath exuding a rich aroma, but he was loaded to the wales. He required every inch of the broad aisle leading from the rear of the court room to make his way to front row of chairs corresponding to the prisoners' dock. And he needed the support of the table while he told a rambling story covering a period of a year or more that was finally brought down to the early hours of yesterday morning when the police stepped in and without much ado informed him he was under arrest.

It was a spectacle not often seen in any court and but for the extreme leniency of City Magistrate Thomas would have been cut short with Easterwood remanded to the city jail until sober. As it is, Judge Thomas warned Easterwood that his condition and his attitude toward the court and the police generally was likely to cost him dearly, the warning concluding with a direct order to Easterwood to leave the courtroom. All this after Judge Thomas had adjudged him guilty and assessed a fine of ten dollars.

It was a rather busy session for the police judge. Of course the women and the man arrested early yesterday morning as inmates of disorderly houses did not put in an appearance, with the exception of two who were present with their attorney. A demurrer was entered to the complaints against these two women and upon argument the demurrer was sustained, and their cases dismissed. The attorney asked that no new complaints be made against these women as they had already been given a good scare and he did not believe they would be in court again.

The cases of Connor and Easterwood were tried separately, although they had been arrested jointly. Connor entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct by fighting after telling of his encounter with Easterwood in which the latter was made to appear as the aggressor, stated that if he did strike Easterwood at all it was clearly and solely in self defense. Upon this showing and upon the additional showing that it did not appear that Connor had been drinking at all the case was dismissed.

Easterwood had been tardy in arriving. When Connor was allowed to go Easterwood became uneasy when his name was not called and directed the attention of the judge to his presence in court. He was informed that his case would be reached presently. He was finally called. He asked permission to go into all the details of the affair. This permission was granted. He started to talk but the big fan bothered him. The room was warm, too, and the perspiration stood out on his forehead. He mopped his brow and continued to talk. Then he began to make a display of the money which seemed to amount to about fifteen dollars. When the judge told him he had been found guilty on his own statements he asked if the bail money was enough to pay the fine or if the court expected more.

"Because I've got it right here if it does," he said.

When Easterwood tried to make it appear that somebody lied, and that some of the policemen were good fellows while others were not such good fellows, the court cut him short.

"Easterwood, you are drunk right now," said Judge Thomas. "Unless you conduct yourself in a proper manner this affair is likely to cost you more than it has already. I would advise you to sit down and keep quiet. Your case has been disposed of."

"But don't you want some of this money I've got here?" rambled Easterwood. "Just say so if you do."

"It isn't your money we want. It's order in this court and now it is about time for you to sit down or leave the court room," answered the judge.

Easterwood subsided into a chair where he remained about two minutes or until the warmth of the room began to get to his work and he ambled out. He hung about the city hall plaza for a few minutes and then wandered off to tell his friends about it.

The haul of the police the night before and early yesterday morning netted something like $125.

Late yesterday afternoon a young woman, said to be the wife of a well known railroad man, was picked up by Chief of Police Brishols who found her in a drunken condition at the rear of the "Health Office," a soft drink resort on East Adams street conducted by Jack Elliott. The woman gave the name of June Doe and was booked as drunk and disorderly. She spent the next few hours in sleeping prociously in a cell in the city jail.

moderately higher levels, the record was one of increasing apathy.

Conflicting crop news, labor conditions, which offered little encouragement, additional excellent railway earnings and the further easing of money rates—all factors of importance in more normal times—were ignored or received with indifference. Sentiment among traders lost little of its pessimism, but the scant supply of certain stocks available for short covering made for greater caution.

Shipping shares were the leaders. Motor shares rallied slightly from their low levels of yesterday. Petro-leums were slightly more steady and quotations were apathetic with metals, except Tennessee Copper, which again lost ground.

Sugars suffered from further attrition but the additional depreciation in quoted values among this group was attributed quite as much to overextended bull accounts as to statistical or trade developments.

United States Steel, which was relatively inconspicuous, held steady with rails, most of the day, but the latter slumped in the final hour, though only nominally.

DUN'S REVIEW NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Dun's Review tomorrow will say:

Exceptionally gratifying reports regarding trade, industry and transportation are somewhat modified by less favorable news from the agricultural regions.

Yet the reduced crop estimates, while accentuating the tendency toward wholesome conservatism, have not raised doubts as to the maintenance of the forward movement in business. In spite of the various drawbacks and uncertainties, chiefly in sustained economic lines progress is undiminished, the large increase in new enterprise testifying to strong faith in the future. Notwithstanding the magnitude of previous purchases, many interests are disposed to extend commitments further, being prompted to cover far-distant needs by fears of a growing scarcity of supplies and the possibility that prices may go still higher.

Recoveries have occurred in certain lines that recently showed evidences of reaction, such as in steel and dry goods, while additional advices in commodities which thus far have given no signs of yielding. Weekly bank clearings, $4,167,040,029.

BOSTON WOOL BOSTON, Aug. 4.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

"The wool market has been very dull this past week. The sales for a week probably total not over two million pounds. Prices are generally firm. "The situation at the mills is sound but the keen edge appears to have been worn off the goods market. Foreign markets are steady and firm."
